How Do Zebra Shades Work?

the whole mechanic behind zebra shades is the alternating stripes of light and dark. The way these shades are built means that you have full light control – and the light covers the entire room, rather than hitting a particular spot (as roman shades or roller blinds tend to do).As the solid panels line up with the spaces in between the stripes, the light is entirely blocked and the room is darkened. When the panels are overlapping, the stripes of light will come through, brightening up the room. If you choose a light-blocking fabric, they can be just as effective as blackout roller shades – perfect for blocking out harmful UV rays.

To use zebra shades, there is a chain or cord loop on one side that is pulled to move the fabric loop around the roller. This will adjust the shaded lines to create the desired effect. For the smart home aesthetic, you can also find cordless zebra shades; they come with a motor and remote, making it easier to operate from anywhere in the room.
